Background:

Komfort's contemporary systems were fitted alongside traditional features for a royal unveiling. Seabrook Crisps is renowned in the North of England as a producer of flavoured crinkle cut potato crisps which would both portray its increasing presence in the market and attract new customers from a wider range of retail outlets and geographical areas.

The Building:

As the company approached its 65th anniversary, it wanted a new look to its Bradford head office

The Brief in Brief:

Time Limit Interiors worked closely with Janus Architecture to interpret their design and specification for the building which combined traditional features such as the existing beamed ceiling and metal pillars, with contemporary partitioning.

Komfort's Solution:

Komfort's single glazed Polar, to a height of 3600mm, was the preferred partitioning option. The striking glazed runs incorporated pivot glass doors with patch fixings and overpanels. Simple manifestation enhanced the clean lines.

The End Result:

The project was completed in six weeks and HRH Princess Anne accepted Seabrook's invitation to open the new facility..

Think partitioning, think Komfort.
